

Global Exchange Reach

IPC

enabling exchanges to attract order flow and distribute market data into new geographies

Solution Sheet

Global Exchange Reach

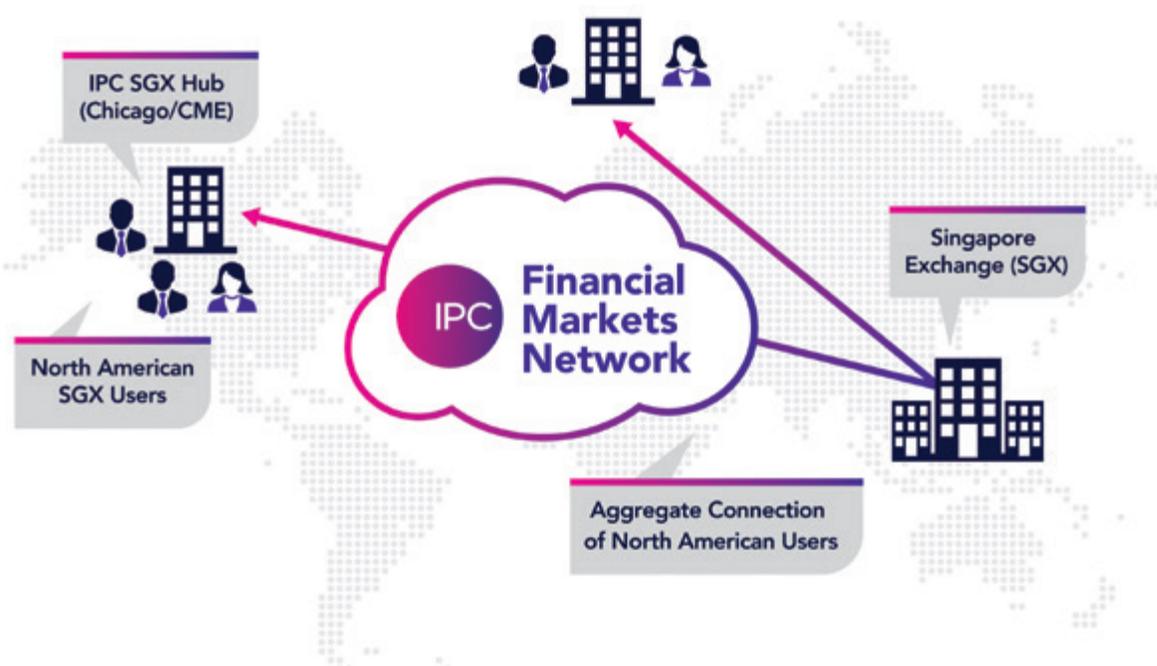

IPC's Global Exchange Reach is an industry-leading connectivity solution that enables exchanges, alternative trading systems (ATSs), multilateral trading facilities (MTFs) and other liquidity venues located in one part of the world to attract order flow and distribute market data in new geographies.

Liquidity venues are increasingly looking to attract institutional investors, asset managers, hedge funds and market makers outside of their primary market to fuel profitable and sustainable growth. At the same time, investors often seek access to new sources of liquidity if they find that their home market is saturated. Global Exchange Reach addresses these important market needs.

Global Exchange Reach supports various access models, including Connexus[®] Extranet, local cross-connects and Bring Your Own Comms, and offers flexibility in the commercial options.

Global Exchange Reach will offer exchanges the ability to launch connectivity of their market data feeds and order flow into new geographies

Singapore Exchange selects IPC to manage new hub in Chicago

“The goal of establishing a hub for SGX in Chicago is to make Asia’s financial markets more accessible to investors in North America and broaden SGX’s international footprint,” said Ng Kin Yee, Head of Market Data and Connectivity at SGX. “We look forward to more participants connecting directly to SGX through the SGX Chicago Hub.”

Benefits:

- Designed to allow an exchange based in one region to offer lower latency connectivity in other regions without requiring clients to connect long haul lines
- Clients can use a dedicated CE, or be part of a shared Multi-Tenant CE
- Clients can use IPC provided and managed telecom services, or provide their own (BYOComms)
- Exchanges have the option to sponsor all or part of client connectivity
